Mr. Thomson's easy victories over Phil Sears, Jr., of Boston, and Alexander Morton, of the local club, did not tend to advance his stock a bit. His playing in both these contests was very ragged, and only his superior knowledge of the game carried him through. Fearing drew Stockton as an opponent, and this pair gave one of the pretiest exhibitions ever seen in the clubhouse. The playing was so even that at the end on the fourth set they were on even terms, and a fifth set was necessary. Unfortunately for Fearing, he fell and sprained his right wrist in one of the games of the fourth set, and his wrist was not strong enough for him to make any kind of a defence in the concluding set, which was won by Stockton is to love.

Stockton's victory over Thomson in the finals was such a hollow one that it leaves no doubt as to who is the better man and more capable of defending the cup. It was expected that a match would be brought about between Mr. B. S. Garmendia, who was last year's champion, and the present champion, but Mr. Stockton said he would not challenge the local player at present.
